Image: The Magazine of Art, Vol. VIII frontispiece, ca. 1885 [drawn by Robert W. Macbeth]
BASE BALL IS ENGLAND.

In the year 1869, the National Club at Washington, composed principally of elderly in the government, were able to extend the game through the winter, and they were also able to have the first day of any length ever made by a base ball club, and at the time assumed the character of a world's record. In the following year the Athletics, Brooks, and Philadelphia, made a similar effort to impress the winter. In 1870 the Cincinnati Red Stockings were in England, and the base ball was played there all the season. The American club in London and the Yankees in Manchester were in the game all year, and were able to have as many as 50,000 people in the stands. The American club in London was the most successful, and was able to extend the game through the winter, and they were also able to have the first day of any length ever made by a base ball club, and at the time assumed the character of a world's record. In the following year the Athletics, Brooks, and Philadelphia, made a similar effort to impress the winter. In 1870 the Cincinnati Red Stockings were in England, and the base ball was played there all the season. The American club in London and the Yankees in Manchester were in the game all year, and were able to have as many as 50,000 people in the stands. The American club in London was the most successful, and was able to extend the game through the winter, and they were also able to have the first day of any length ever made by a base ball club, and at the time assumed the character of a world's record. In the following year the Athletics, Brooks, and Philadelphia, made a similar effort to impress the winter. In 1870 the Cincinnati Red Stockings were in England, and the base ball was played there all the season. The American club in London and the Yankees in Manchester were in the game all year, and were able to have as many as 50,000 people in the stands. The American club in London was the most successful, and was able to extend the game through the winter, and they were also able to have the first day of any length ever made by a base ball club, and at the time assumed the character of a world's record. In the following year the Athletics, Brooks, and Philadelphia, made a similar effort to impress the winter. In 1870 the Cincinnati Red Stockings were in England, and the base ball was played there all the season. The American club in London and the Yankees in Manchester were in the game all year, and were able to have as many as 50,000 people in the stands. The American club in London was the most successful, and was able to extend the game through the winter, and they were also able to have the first day of any length ever made by a base ball club, and at the time assumed the character of a world's record.
"What are you going to do about it. If "Old Honest" lets him loose again!"